The succesive failures which so invariably followed each attempt in this country to establish an art journal did not prove the indifference of the people of America to the claims of high art. So soon as a proper appreciation of the want and an ability to meet it were shown, the public at once rallied with enthusiasm to its support, and the result was a great artistic and commercial triumph—THE ALDINE.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light and graceful literatore; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although cuch succeeding number affords a tresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up et the close of the year. While other provention and conjuncted with rivals of a similar class. THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character.
